- COMMENT. To Macklin the Player: The Laity as well as Priests of all Religions are the same. Macklin, Thou mayst remember when thou wert learning the part of Shylock in the Merchant of Venice, thou camest daily to the Change, and artfully didst't introduce thyself into my company, till thou hadst't stolen my Face, my Looks, and not content with the Index, thou did'st turn over the volume of my Mind, as if thy Author had been wanting in the manner of bis character, and didst't show me on the stage to the Disgrace of my Tribe, for which we wish thee not in Abraham's Bosom, thou may'st be sure.
- Now if thou hast a mind to compromise the Affair, and serve thyself at thy Benefit time, publicly declare what Place thou did'st frequent, and what set of Christians thou did'st herd with, before thou playd'st the part of Iago in the Moor of Venice; Comply and our Rancor to thee will be turn'd into Love and Service. s/Zorobabel. PS I will call to thee tonight at thy Synagogue in the Hay-market, about the sixth Hour, as you players reckon, for intelligence.—Daily Advertiser.
- COMMENT. At the Temple Punch House, by Inner Temple Gate Tony Aston exhibits a dialogue between Abigail and Vellum, Dorinda and Scrub, Hob and Mary . . . Prologue, Epilogue, and Pasquin.—Theatrical Clippings, Folger Library. IT
- SAMSON. Samson – Beard; Dalila – Signora Francesina; Micah – Signora Francesina, Sullivan; Harapha – Reinhold; Israelite Woman – Signora Avolio (Dean, Handel's Dramatic Oratorios, p. 351). Mrs Delany to Mrs Dewes, 25 Feb.: Francesina sings most of Mrs Cibber's parts and some of Mrs Clive's. [See Deutsch, Handel, p. 585.] Friday 24

- COMMENT. London Daily Post and General Advertiser, 25 Feb. contained the following verses: Hearing Mr Handel's Samson at Covent Garden.
- Rais'd by his subject Milton nobly flew
And all Parnassus open'd to our view;
By Milton fir'd Great Handel strikes our ear,
And every power of harmony we hear.
When two such mighty artists blend their fire
Pour forth each Charm that Genius can inspire
The man whose bosom does not raptures feel,
Must have no soul, or all his heart be steel.
