COMMENT. Mainpiece: By Desire. A great Noise, the whole House against us—When Garrick appear'd one from the Slips cry'd out Monsieur, & great Numbers Hiss'd—the play went on—w^{ch} done, the Mutiny began, amazing noise—no palting, except one Apple; y^e pit to y^e Boxes cry'd—now draw y^r Swords, w^{ch} makes us think, the Riot was occasion'd by the Box people being so busy & turning some out of the pit & Gall: before. Some benches were pull'd up, & Mr Lacy gave up the Dance to appease 'em—being Sat: our friends were at y^e Opera, & the common people had leisure to do Mischief (Cross). [Lynham in The Chevalier Noverre, quotes from the Journal Étranger of 25 Nov. 1755: "The blackguards . . . tore up the benches and threw them into the Pit on the opposing party; they broke all the mirrors, the chandeliers, &c., and tried to climb onto the stage to masacre everybody; but, as there is a magnificent organization in this theatre, in three minutes all the decor had been removed, all the traps were ready to come into play to swallow up those who might venture up, all the wings were filled with men armed with sticks, swords, halberds, &c., and behind the scenes the great reservoir was ready to be opened to drown those who might fall on the stage itself." Cross lists no Receipts.]

COMMENT. This night the Chinese Festival was hotly call'd for by the Boxes, & strongly oppos'd by a few in the Pit, the Gentlemen came out, & insisted upon its being given out, w^{ch} at last Mr Garrick did; but not before it seem'd agreed that it shou'd be done 3 times a week for the Boxes, & other Entertainments the other 3 Days for the Pit, all Parties seem'd satisfied—but the Consequence prov'd otherways (Cross).
